SEVEN MORE GO TO PRISON.

JUDGE LIPPINCOTT OUTWITS THE BAL LOT STUFFERS' LAWYER.

The Letter Had Got a Stay from a Pederal Court, but the Prisoners Were Commit-ted Before He Could Return from Treaten Notwithstanding the efforts of Lawyer Chas.J. Peshall, the seven remaining convicted Jersey City ballot-box stullers were taken to State prison yesterday. Peshall went to Trenton on Thursday to apply to Judge Green of the United States District Court for a writ of habeas corpus for the convicted election offi-cers who escaped going to State prison on Tuesday because they did not happen to be at the court house when their associates were so summarily sent away by order of Judge Lippincett. As the men had to be in jail before the application for the writ could be made, they went secretly to the county jail on Thursday and surrendered themselves to Jailer Pavis. Mr. Peshall procured affidavits from them that they were in jail, and attached them to the papers which he proposed to submit to Judge Green. No one know that they were in jail except Mr. Peshall, Jailer Davis, Sheriff McPhillips, the men themselves, and a few of their intimate friends. When Judge Lippincott questioned Sheriff McPhillips Thursday morning as to the whereabouts of the missing men the Sheriff said he had been trying to find them and would pick them up as soon as he could. At the time the Sheriff made that report to the Court some of the men had made affidavit that they were then in custody and confined in the county jail. The prisoners and their friends kept an anxious watch in the jail during Thursday night. They had every-thing there that they needed for their comfort. but they were anxious to learn the result of Mr. Peshall's mission. They had great faith in his ability to keep them out of prison, because he had suceded in keeping the negro murderer Hallinger from the gallows for a year or more. Some time during the night Jailer Davis received a despatch from Mr. Peshall that he had procured a stay for Durancey, Fallon, Hart, and Moschell, the first Election Board had procured a stay for Durancey, Fallon, Hart, and Moschell, the first Election Board convicted, and whose case was made the test case before the Supreme Court and the Court of Errors. The prisoners were highly clated, and they slept comfortably in the expectation of being released yesterday morphag, with a prespect of freedom until the United States Court passed upon the case.

When Jurige Lippincott learned about 11 o'clock that the missing convicted election officers were in the caunty juil awaiting the arrival of Mr. Peshall with his notice of a stay he ordered Sheriff McPhillips to bring them into court. The sheriff went over to the county juil and returned in a few minutes, followed by Hart, Moschell Fallon, Kennedr, and Miller, escoted by several constables. Judge Lippincott, in a calm, unruffled voice, and without betraying any evidence of feeling, said:

"These prisoners are in the custody of the Sheriff. The Sheriff is to take them to State prison as soon as possible. He will take them at once. On the way to State prison he is not to recognize any paper that may be served on him. Any caper that is to be served may be served after they are in State prison. You need not waste time or expense in procuring carriages for these men. You may take them away in a horse car and land them in State prison without delay."

The prisoners, who had been standing while the Jurige was speaking, sank back in their seats with a sigh of despair. They had been anxiously awaiting the arrival of Mr. Peshall, in whom all their hopes were centred, but he had not appeared. Sheriff McPhillips left the court reom for a few minutes. During his absence County Superintendent James F. Onnon appeared before the Court and said he desired to surrender Joseph G. Mulrain. He was Mulrain's bondsman, and he said he understood that Mulrain was in the county juil. Judge Lippincott directed a constable to bring Mulrain into court. When he arrived he was accompanied by J. Thomas Durancey, the other missing man. Judge Lippincott ordered them to at once.

A moment later Lawyer Peshall drove hurriedly up to the front of the Court House in a cub. He hastoned into court and handed a paper to the Sheriff, who passed the Judge Lippincott. The Judge read it and passed it over to District Attorney Winfield. The latter read it and smiled.

"The Sheriff will proceed at once to take the prisoners to State prison," said Judge Lippincott.

"The Sheriff will proceed at once to take the prisoners to State prison," said Judge Lippincott.

They were taken out of the court room, placed in a passing horse car, and conveyed to the Pennsylvania Raliroad depot, where they took an early afternoon train for Trenton. Judge Lippincott said the writ served by Peshali was of no value because the prisoners had already been committed. They can be released from State prison only on a writ of habeas corpus.

Thenton, July 1.—Yesterday word reached Jersey City that unusual favors were being shown the thirteen stuffers constituting the first batch brought here. The information was to the effect that the men's heads had not been cropped at all, and that instead of wearing prison uniforms they were roaming about the prison in their own clothes. In consequence of these false rumors the men lodged in the prison by Sheriff McPhillips to-day received prompt attention. One of them wanted to know the moment he got inside the prison if he had to be shaved. Why, certainly, said a turnkey, and in twenty minutes the whole lot had been cropped and shaved. After undergoing this the stuffers had their plunge in the cold bath, and were then required to don the parti-colored suits of the State.

Lawer Peshall will go before Judge Green of the Federal Court on Tuesday, he says, and move for the discharge of Moschell, Hart, and Durancey on the ground of illegal commitment. He says Judges Lippincot is in contempt of the Federal Court for ignoring its process, and that Sheriff McPhillips is liable civilly for false imprisonment. The Sheriff, he said to-night, had no business to disregard the service of the notice of appeal to the United States Supreme Court, His powers and duties are defined by the law, and he cannot on dictated to by a Judge.

ACCIDENT IN THE STATE CAMP. Quartermaster Pratt Thrown from Hi Horse and Badly Injured.

STATE CAMP. PERESELL, July 1 .- The second serious accident of this season's camp tour occurred to-day just before the call sounded for regimental parade. Field and staff officers were to appear again mounted, as they did last night, and their horses were already in front of their quarters, and some of the officers were in the saddle, when Quartermaster Dana B. Pratt, the life of the camp, got upon his horse. The animal is one that gave a lot of trouble last night. Pratt was no sooner in the saddle than the horse mess hall the Quartermaster lost his seat. (He threw his arms around the horse's neck, but at the next jump the animal threw him off, and at the next jump the animal threw him off, and he fell under his feet. Pratt is a heavy man, and the readway where he struck was almost as hard as stone. He made a move as if to rise but failed, and then it was evident that he was hadly hurt.

He was lying face downward. He could use one leg, but the other was disabled, torn, and bleeding. Help was at hand in a moment, a cot was brought from the mess hall camp, and Mr. Fratt was carried to the hospital, where Surgeon Alvah H. Doty and Assistant Surgeon Charles N. Thompson attended him at one. They found him badly shaken up, and the calf of his left leg was cut right through, probably by the caulk of the horse's shoe. through, probably by the caulk of the horse's sloe. He is a dentist at Seventy-second street sloe. He is a dentist at Seventy-second street slow. He is a dentist at Seventy-second street and Second avenue.

It is notewardly that the officers now in tamp, as well as these of the Sixty-ninth, not only got along without any friction with the regular army officers detailed here to assist and instruct them, but that they have without exception expressed pleasure at having professional soldiers as preceptors. The high standing and personal courtesy of Col. Bates and Lieuts. French and Hardin have had much to do with breaking down whatever may have been left of the old-time lealousy that existed between the militis man and the regular army man. On the other hand, the soldierly qualities of the National Guardsman of to-day must recommend them to the professional.

Military Storekeeper Barnie put up another street of tents to-day in preparation for the coming of the new lot of troops to-morrow. The Fourteenth Hegiment of Brooklyn expects to come in 500 strong, and two or more of the separate companies that will make up Capt. Haubennessed's Second Provisional Battalion, have promised to bring their full complements of 104 men each. The men of the Fourteenth will be glad to hear of an increase of rank which came to Mr. Barnie last night. Mr. Jarnie was their old Quartermaster, and was on the supernumerary list with the rank of First Lieutonant. Goy, Flower has made him a Maior, and his commission was delivered to him last night by Gen. Varian in the tent on the hill, and Louis Windholz made it pleasant for him.

NORTH TROY, Vt., July 1.-Mrs. Chester Bullis of Stevens Mills, in Troy, was shot through the heart and instantly killed last evening by the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of her 12-year-old son.

KEW BOOKS. Briof Reviews of Important and Interesting New Publications. An exceptionally readable book is Sir Charles Gavan Duffy's "Conversations With Carlyle" (imported by Charles Scribner's Sons). It has the air of being, within its limits, as faithful a thing as Boswell's report of the talk of Dr. Johnson, and it has something like the interest attaching to that immortal performance. The conversations here recorded occurred for the most part, we believe between the years 1845 and 1855, before the chronicler went away to Australia, though a number of the utterances date later. We have here the philosopher's opinions regarding a number of questions and persons. Thackeray, Dickens, Emerson, Coleridge, Shelley, Buckle, and a good many others are summed up with all the positiveness and seriousness that one would suspect and with plenty of epigram and strong language. It is especially evident here that few persons suited Carlyle exactly. He wanted people to be tremendously serious, novelists and poets included. It is curious enough to hear him demanding a profound purpose from Dickens, as though the "Pickwick Papers" ought to have been in the style of "Sartor Resartus" or the essay on "Ma-Dickens was a good little fellow. according to the philosopher in these conver-sations, one of the most cheery and innocent natures he had ever encountered. But his theory of life was all wrong. He thought his men ought to be buttered up, and the world made soft and accommodating for them, and all sorts of fellows have turkey for their Christmas dinner He had wraten nothing of much value in solving the problems of life (think how clear it has all become since Carlyle himself wrote!). Still he was worth something: worth a penny to rend of an evening before going to bed, which was about what a read of him cost you. Thackeray had more reality in him, and would cut up into a dozen Dickenses Thackeray despised himself and his work, and on that account could not always do it even moderately well. He was ersentially a man of grim, silent, stern nature, but lately he had circulated among fashionable people, dining out every day (monstrous fact for the dyspeptic to contemplate!), and he covered this native disposition with a varnish of smooth and smiling complacency not at all pleasant to contemplate. The course he had got into since he had taken to cultivate dinner eating man ought to be a gentleman and ought not to be a snob. Sir Charles asked Carlyle if it was a practical joke or to win a bet that Thackeray named the heroine of "Pendennis" after a famous courtesan then in London. Carlyle said he did not know anything of this, but it could scarcely be an accident with a man about town like Thackeray. Emerson had a sharp, perking, little face, and in answer to objections or expositions he kept bobbing it up and down with a "Yissir. yissir"and here the Chelsea philosopher would mimic the philosopher of Concord. Lamb had no practical sense in him, and in conversation was accustomed to turn to quips and jests whatever turned up-an ill example to younger men, who had to live their lives in a world altogether serious, and where it behooved them to consider their position in a spirit quite other than jocose; for a wrong path led to the nether darkness. Carlyle, who taught that the course of history was regulated by the lives of great men, would not be postered reading Buckle, who taught that it was regulated by the course of great rivers. He read bits of Mr. Buckle's book in the reviews occasionally, and found nothing in them but shallow dogmatism and inordinate conceit. Shelley was a shricking poet; it was to be wondered what an ancient Roman or a Norseman would have thought of his measured hysterics; but all poetry was out of place in these days, prose being a better vehicle for modern thought and adequate for the expression of anybody. He paid his respects to communities, too, as well as to individuals Lynch law, he said, was the invention of people given to loud talk and self-exhibition, who had done nothing considerable in the world that he had over heard of. And there is plenty more of the same sort, all indicating

Mr. Archibald H. Grimke's "Life of Charles Sumner." in the "American Reformer" series (Funk & Wagnalls Company), sketches the traits of Sumner and the incidents of his career in a clear and vivid way that will recommend itself to the general reader. Especially good is the picture of the "scholar in politics" at the age of 20, as he appeared in this city on the eve of his departure for Europe. He had a notable head at that time. Mr. Grimke tells us. but his physical part had not then reached the fulness of its development, and his good looks hardly extended below his shoulders. His legs were neither sturdy nor handsome, and his body was little if at all superior to his legs. He was long and lean and ungainly, but active enough, and a great walker. The story of his sojourn in Europe is an explanation of his serious and earnest character. He learned languages, cultivated the acquaintance of great men, and labored hard in many ways to improve and advance himself. It seems somelow in reading this account as though it had been settled among all sorts of persons in the beginning that he was to be distinguished. The signs doubtless were unmistakable. Mr. Grimke's blegraphy gives us an excellent account of this early part of his career, and con-events of his later and public life. "The Sisters; a Tragedy," by Mr. Algernon Charles Swinburne (United States Book Company), is the nicest, quietest tragedy that has ever come under our observation. It is wellbred, polite, full of the amenities and restraint that should distinguish family intercourse The hero, baptized Reginald, but, a fine exercise of the tragic instinct, called Redgie in this drama, a goldenhaired boy who has just been slightly wounded at the battle of Waterloo, is loved by twins. He marries one of them, whereupon the other one permits herself to be guilty o the passive offence of allowing the wedded pair to take poison. Their demise is lovely. That is the unwithholdable truth about it. Nothing could be sweeter than the whole business. It's a syllabub and a daisy. It would be impossible, we are convinced, to carry off a hero called Redgie in more delightfully appro priate style. A novelty, and a very acceptable one, in the way of reminiscences may be found in " The Autobiography of a Gamekeeper," edited by Arthur H. Byng and Stephen M. Stephens (Macmillan & Co.). This is the story of John Wilkins of Stanstoad, Essex. It is instructive without doubt, but more particularly it is interesting, amusing, and refreshing. The editors seem to have displayed excellent judgment in dealing with the text. It affords what the reader cannot help but feel is a very justiflable idea of John Wilkins. The narrator begins with his earliest recollections, which date nearly seventy years back, and thereafter rambles as he pleases. He tells of the thrashings bestowed upon him by his father, who was also a gamekeeper, and naturally a stern man, of the fist fights and rabbit snarings of his boyhood, of his affrays with the poachers. of the duties and tricks of his business, of the treatment of dogs, of his methods in the bread-English gamekeeper might be expected to be interested in and wise about. He vaunts his courage and his skill with a freedom warrant-ed by both his age and his nationality, and it is fascinating to listen to him. His portrait and other illustrations add to the interest of the big car along when it was filled with passen gers. The new car is 30 feet 0 inches long. 7 feet Cinches wide inside, and 7 feet 9 inches wide over all. It is only about four feet short of being as long again as the old cars, and is sev being as long again as the old cars, and is several inches wider. The old cars would seat twenty neople, ten on a side, and the new will seat thirty-six, eighteen on each side, with comfort. The change that will be most noticed is that there is a high wire gate on the platform on the side toward the roadway, and that the only way to board a car is on the side nearest the sidewalk. Newsbors will not be able, as now, to drop from an un-town car and catch the down-town car on the fly. It will not be safe, when the cable cars are running, to stand between the tracks and get caught between two cars.

It will be Devoted to the Interests of Grad Boston, July 1.-A magazine, which will be devoted to the interests of the graduates of Harvard College, is soon to be published by a Board of Editors which was selected to-day. At a largely attended meeting of graduates at the Tremont House the scheme was organized and put upon a solid financial basis. Already $20,000 has been subscribed toward the new magazine, and more than 2,000 names the new magazine, and more than 2,000 names are on the subscription list. It will be called the Harrard Graduates Magazine, and the first edition will be nublished next October.

Editor Fortune Wine.

Editor T. Thomas Fortune of the Non York Age has come out on top in his damage sul against James Trainor, a hotel and saloon keeper. Fortune, who is a negro, went into Trainor's place, asked for a glass of beer, and Trainor's place, asked for a glass of beer, and the manager refused to serve him. When Fortune remonstrated he was assaulted and finally locked up. He sued and got a verdict of $1,016. The defendant's counsel appealed from the decision of the lower court, and last week the case was heard before the General Term, T. McCanta Stewart presenting the argument for the plaintiff. This was the first time that a colored lawyer had ever appeared before that body.

Yesterday the General Term handed down its decision, affirming the judgment of the lower court. The opinion is written by Justice Patterson.

By ERNEST IN-GERSOLL 12m > Flexible cloth, $1.25. In view of the remarkably favorable reception given to Appleton's Chuadian Guide Book, Part I., Eastern Canada, the publishers feel that tourists and readers will be interested in the announcement of a companion volum which will describe Western Canada in the same style

MEWEN.—On June 80, 1892, at Hoboken, N. J., Emma Newes, daughter of John and Mamie Mewes, aged 1 month and 11 days. Friends are invited to attend the funeral from the regions north of Toronto, through the peninsular region of Canala, along the Great Lakes, up the Nepigon River, and then, emerging into the Northwest, he describes Mauitoba, the valley of the Saskatchewau, type founder, aged 51 years, at the residence of his brother-in-law, 1,057 Jefferson av., Brooklyn. Friends are respectfully invited to attend the funeral and the Red River, picturing the life of the Indians an the old Hudson Bay posts, and finally, after the journey across the plains, he reaches the Canadian Rocky Mountains. The wonderful scenery of this district, perhaps the finest on the continent, is fully described. Under Mr. Ingersoll's guidance the tourist visits Band the Canadian National Park, and the wonderfu glaciers and canons of that region. After a series o vivid pictures of the mountain scenery, Mr. Ingersol routinues on into British Columbia, and closes hi rogainess on into British Columba, and croses his volume with descriptions of Westminster, Vancouver's Island, and a sketch of the routes to Alaska.

It is safe to say that no two volumes dealing with Canada present so much helpful and entertaining information, in so convenient a form, as Appletons' Canadian Guide-Books. The Guide to Western Canada, like its predecessor, is elaborately illustrated, and conlike its predecessor, is elaborately illustrated, and con tains the latest maps of all the districts described. Will Carleton's Latest Poems.

TON. Illustrated. Square 8vo. Cloth, Ornamental, $2.00; Gilt Edges, $2.50; Full Seal, $4.00. Uniform with: FARM BALLADS .-FARM LEGENDS.—FARM FESTIVALS.

Will Carleton is probably the most popular American poet now living, and his works are read and admired wherever the English language is known. The secret of his success is doubtless to be found in his adherence to the principle that there is no thought so great that it cannot be resolved into elements easily understood by the average human intellect, and in his aim to say those things which shall reach the heart of the people, and not only en-tertain, but make better. This volume is the sixth and last of the beautiful and very popu-lar "Farm and City Series." It contains Mr. Carleton's latest poems, and is uniform in style with his earlier works.

By the Author of "Daily."

Mrs. Keats Bradford. A Novel. By MARIA LOUISE POOL. Post 8vo, Cloth, Ornamental, $1.25.

In point of dramatic interest and genuine are stic quality this work is in no respect inferior to that very entertaining story. "Roweny in Boston." of which it may be considered the sequel. The same characters whose company was so enjoyable in the earlier volume are again introduced, under new conditions, but with their peculiar traits as strongly marked and as faithfully presented as before.
